New Flash Handout Converts Flash files to PDFs

Latest creation from FlashJester is first all-in-one tool for PDF conversion

WELLINGBOROUGH, UK – Dec. 01, 2005 – FlashJester, the leading provider of third party support for Flash software, introduces Flash Handout, the first all-in-one tool to convert Flash SWFs and FLAs to PDFs. With its easy-to-use wizard format, Flash Handout makes it possible to print individual Flash frame or frame-by-frame animation in a slideshow format.

“When you want to review and break-down a Flash file, Flash Handout eliminates the need to take individual screenshots and export images from Flash and then create a PDF which is tedious and time-consuming,” said Davendra Patel, CEO of 3rd Eye Solutions. “This product brings efficiency, speed and a professional edge to the process. Whether you want to show a Flash work-in-progress or finished creation, Flash Handout is a great way to breakdown the work for presentations and client review.”

With Flash Handout, there is no need for other third party tools, and the user-friendly wizard interface guides users through the seven-step handout creation process. There are two different tracks to follow depending on whether the starting file is a SWF or FLA.

Flash Handout allows the user to choose from three different capture methods: keyframes, total number of frames or whatever frame/time count the user selects. The user also controls all details of the page size and setup. Throughout the process, the wizard features a preview window so the user can view the progress and edit the frames as needed. There are also special encryption and password-protection features. The end result is a custom PDF file that features the desired Flash frames for easy viewing.

Flash Handout is designed for the Windows environment and supports Flash MX 2004. Flash Handout is available for [insert price] at www.flashhandout.com.
